Winter Hangar Prohibitions

With winter upon us, the Salt Lake City Department of Airports (SLCDA) would like to remind tenants of the required and prohibited operation procedures in hangars.

- Refueling aircraft in hangars, including shade hangars, is prohibited. Tenants wishing to self-fuel their aircraft must obtain a self-fuel permit from airport operations. Aircraft can be no closer than 25 feet to their hangar when fueling.
- Starting aircraft in and/or taxing into and out of hangars is prohibited. Aircraft need to be pushed out of hangars to the taxi-lane centerline prior to engine start.
- Power run-ups are only authorized in designated run up area near the ends of each runway.
- Enclosed T-hangars are required to have fully charged and properly inspected fire extinguishers accessible to the front hangar door at all times. Fire extinguishers must display inspection stickers from a competent authority authorized to meet requirements under Utah code.
- Only electric engine heaters are authorized for use when placed at least 16 inches above the hangar floor and are electrically connected with a minimum of a 12-gauge extension cord.
- Open flame space heaters are prohibited at all times. Electric space heaters can be used when fully attended and when connected to a power source with a minimum of a 12-gauge extension cord.
- Vehicles need to be parked inside the tenants leased hangar or in the parking lot while the tenant is out flying.
- Only non-corrosive ice melt can be used on the airport.
